August 24, 2023

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

- Stock markets and USD up, while government bond yields are mixed on renewed risk-taking by investors in Artificial Intelligence -especially Nvidia- and tech stocks stemming from an improved outlook for the companies, and awaiting Powell's speech tomorrow at Jackson Hole
- Market's attention is on the beginning of Jackson Hole symposium and on comments from Harker of the Fed of Philadelphia. Regarding economic figures, durable goods orders for July decline 5.2% m/m after increasing 4.4% the previous month. Jobless claims for the week ending August 19 stood at 230k down from 240k
- In Mexico, INEGI released inflation for 1H-August at 0.32% 2w/2w, with the core at 0.19%, mostly in line with expectations. As such, the annual print moderated to 4.67% from 4.78% in the previous fortnight
- Banxico's last meeting minutes will be released later. We will focus on three themes: (1) Their assessment about economic performance, as well as its potential implications for inflation, especially at the core level; (2) the balance of risks for prices, which remains skewed to the upside; and (3) the forward guidance and the conditions that need to be met for pondering an interest rate adjustment, which would likely be a cut
