

Financial Markets Daily

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

- Stock futures in the US lower, government bond yields climbing and the USD strengthens, with investors assimilating employment figures in the US, suggesting that the economy remains in a favorable position, with implications of a larger monetary restriction by the Fed
- In the US, September's employment report showed a creation of 336 jobs, considerably above expectations. In addition, the unemployment rate came in at 3.8%, also higher than expected. At the margin, the participation rate was unchanged, while wages kept climbing, albeit an inch slower than forecasted
- On the monetary front, in India, the central bank held its reference rate at 6.50%. Meanwhile, in Peru, the monetary authority cut rated by 25bps to 7.25%, in line with expectations. In the US we expect a participation from Waller (Fed Governor), this after relevant comments from other speakers yesterday
- The US and China's government are working for Joe Biden and Xi Jinping to meet next month amid this year's APEC's meeting in San Francisco. In other news, former president Trump endorsed the nomination of Jim Jordan, a conservative Republican, to be the next House Speaker
- Today, leaders from the European Union meet, where several key issues will be discussed including the possible integration of more states (Ukraine among them), migration problems, and each country's strategic autonomy
- Attention next week on the fall meetings from the IMF and the World Bank, with one of the main points being the update to global growth estimates in the 'World Economic Outlook' (to be released on Tuesday)
