Banxico: The easing cycle continues as core inflation improved further

- In line with our forecast, Banxico's Board cut the reference rate by 25bps to 10.25% in an unanimous decision
- In our view, the tone maintained a dovish tilt once again, highlighting:
  - (1) Continuity in the forward guidance, signaling that "…the Board expects that the inflationary environment will allow further reference rate adjustments…", suggesting that cuts will continue;
  - (2) They still see an improvement in the inflation outlook, mainly due to reductions at the core component, but with the balance of risks still skewed to the upside –and with the factors that make it up unchanged;
  - (3) Expectations that the effects from recent shocks to non-core inflation on the headline will dissipate over the next quarters; and
  - (4) The view of a lack of dynamism in economic activity during 2025 despite better results in 3Q24
- On inflation forecasts, revisions were mixed. There were upward adjustments to the headline, but with modest changes lower at the core. As in recent meetings, the most significant changes were concentrated in the short-term (see table below). As such, the timing of the convergence to the target remained in 4Q25
- Also relevant, they recognize a risk on the external front on the possible implementation of measures that impact global economic integration. On local asset market dynamics, they said that its behavior has been orderly despite the magnitude of the adjustments
- Considering today's cut, the tone of the statement, and our calls for inflation and economic activity, we reiterate our view of a 25bps cut in the December 19th decision, taking the rate to 10.00%
- Moreover, we expect the easing cycle to continue in 2025, anticipating 25bps reductions in each of the eight meetings scheduled for the year (cumulative: -200bps), with the reference rate closing said year at 8.00%
