Banxico – The dovish tone remains, pointing to -50bps in June

- In line with our forecast, Banxico's Board unanimously cut the reference rate by 50bps to 8.50%
- In our view, the tone remained dovish, highlighting:
  - (1) An unchanged forward guidance, signaling that the Board is "…looking forward it could continue calibrating the monetary policy stance and consider adjusting it in similar magnitudes…";
  - (2) Adjustments in the factors that drove this decision and that should be followed in the implementation of the monetary stance, explicitly adding the behavior of the exchange rate and weakness of economic activity
  - (3) A new improvement in the balance of risks for inflation, quoting the fading out of global shocks; and
  - (4) A judgement of weakness surrounding 1Q25 GDP, with downside risks on this front
- Inflation forecasts were revised higher in the short-term, with adjustments in the next two quarters for the headline and the next four for the core (see table below). Despite this, the timing of the convergence to the target remained in 3Q26
- The evaluation of effects from trade uncertainty both for prices and activity was very similar to the previous statement
- In our view, the monetary authority will consider the economic slowdown, along with a more favorable performance of the Mexican peso –based on USD weakness– as driving factors over the pace of cuts
- Despite our view of a more hawkish Fed and the increase in inflationary pressures in the last couple of fortnights, we expect a 50bps cut in the June 26th given the lack of changes in the forward guidance, taking the rate to 8.00%
- In addition, we reiterate our forecast on the rate by the end of the year at 7.75%. We consider that the room for maneuver for additional cuts could be limited in 2H25 due to the evolution of monetary policy in the US and the impact it could have on rate spreads with said country
