- Yesterday, Saudi Arabia surprised with an extra voluntary cut of 1 million barrels-a-day (Mbbl/d) in July, taking its output to the lowest level since mid-2021. This adjustment is additional to the April's agreement where OPEC and allies announced a global supply reduction by 1.66 Mbbl/d starting in May
- After a complex discussion, the group's total production quotas for 2024 were revised to 40.46 Mbbl/d (41.86 Mbbl/d in December), highlighting an increase for the United Arab Emirates at the expense of some African members. Thus, the nations pledged to maintain their existing cuts until the end of 2024. It is worth noting that the Saudi energy minister said that he "will do whatever is necessary to bring stability to this market." Subsequently, the Saudi Aramco oil company increased prices for the US, Asia, and Europe
- The decision came amid prices hit by a demand outlook vulnerable to China's slow economic recovery and strong bets on higher US interest rates. Thus, international crude-oil references have lost about 13% from their April peak as the boost from lower supply was ephemeral. Despite the OPEC+ stance that has sought to redirect speculators, net long positions in crude-oil futures are still below the 5-year average. The market reaction was positive; however, Brent and WTI remain trading below 80 and 75 $/bbl, respectively
- In this context, we expect Brent to trade between 70 and 100 $/bbl for the rest of the year (previous: 80-110), considering OPEC+'s determination to keep prices high and risk of a lower demand
- The next Ministerial Meeting will take place in Vienna on November 26th, while Joint Ministerial Monitoring Committee will be held every two months
